House Of Hunger

The House of Hunger is a novella/short story collection by Zimbabwean writer Dambudzo Marechera (1952-1987), his first published book. It was published three years after he left university. [1] Sometimes subtitled Short Stories , this work is actually a collection of one novella of 80-odd pages ("House of Hunger") and nine satellite short stories.

The House of Hunger - Wikipedia

House of Hunger, probably Marechera's most renowned work, is as much a historical novel as it is a work of literary prose. The book charts the psychological chaos experienced by the narrator (quite obviously Marechera), as he experiences family pressure, sexual desire, Freudian psychosis and angst all seen through the prism of the colonial oppression and the struggle for liberation in Zimbabwe.

Over the last five years, the number of emergency food parcels provided to people in crisis by food banks in the Trussell Trust's network has increased by 73%. No charity can replace the dignity of buying your own food. To help end the need for food banks, the Trussell Trust commissioned State of Hunger – the most authoritative piece of independent research into hunger in the UK to date.

Another reason the White House butted heads against the bill was due to the irony of Republicans trying to solve hunger through tax provisions rather than, you know, programs that solve hunger. For starters, maybe don't cut $40 billion from the food stamp program? Or, as the White House put it more politely:

Marechera's raw, piercing writings secured his place in African literature as a stylistic innovator and rebel commentator of the ghetto condition. While The House of Hunger is the centerpiece of this collection, readers are also treated to a series of short sketches in which Marechera, with angry humor, further navigates themes of madness, violence, despair, and survival.
